

A drying pool of water

In the immediate vicinity of your settlement there is a small water basin, which is home to rare plants and animals that belong to the Bulgaria's biodiversity. The prolonged drought has posed an ever-increasing threat of drying up the basin and killing most of its inhabitants. What would you do?

- You will organize a prayer for rain.
- You will alert the local administration responsible for the protection of biodiversity in the area. They know what to do.
- You will photograph the last remaining living inhabitants of the pool and with the help of local media and social networks you will tell their sad story with text and photos.
- You will initiate with friends and relatives to bring water to the basin from a nearby water source to save endangered plants and animals.
- You won't do anything.

